So rich and bright, it gives other chards an inferiority complex.

09 Y3 CHARDONNAY

In our humble wine-obsessed opinion, many Napa Valley Chardonnays tend to be overstyled with excessive butter and oak. But as the Jackson siblings know (through lots of "testing"), an outstanding Chardonnay owes its success to outstanding fruit, not a heavy style. That's why we source our grapes from Atlas Peak and the Oak Knoll District. One sip and we think you'll agree, our Y3 Chardonnay is delicious with food or all by itself. James Laube with The Wine Spectator called it a "Top 10 Chardonnay to watch," so it looks some people agree.

Intelligence Squared's Because it's there Mountain Festival will take place on 15 June 2010 at the Royal Geographical Society in London. It will be a one evening-only exploration of what mountains represent to humanity. From mountains' place in literature to how they shape history, from providing sublime nourishment for the soul to fuelling mountaineers' addiction to vertigo, the festival will combine the IQ2 tradition of debate and discussion with film, photography and literature. AN EXCITING NEW WAY TO BE WELL INFORMED

Introduction

For years we've had a love/hate relationship with our RSS readers. We love the blogs we read. So much so, that we subscribe to their feeds. We want to get their new posts directly to our desktops, but something is a bit off.

We feel the feed reading experience isn't as much fun as it's supposed to be. The content is sanitized. The blog's design is lost and everything is laid out badly, in an endless stream of text. Add to this the intimidating unread count badges and the whole experience becomes too stressful.

Never-ending stream of sanitized content = Blackberry?

While there are a few exceptions, most of the feed readers around us display the actual content in long blocks of text, laid out in wide & unreadable columns. They're mostly focused on displaying as much content as possible.

We think such readers are taking the soul out of the posts they are displaying. It's a bit like reading everything on a BlackBerry – a never-ending stream of Black text on fullscreen all White background and all you do is scroll down endlessly.
